Luka Kane lives in a death-row prison called the Loop, where inmates either wait to die or earn delays to their executions. Luka has spent the last 736 days in near isolation, watching his per diem of four minutes of memory playback and running the length of his small walled-in yard until he exhausts himself. Luka's opportunity to escape comes when something catastrophic happens outside the Loop. What he and his fellow inmates find when they emerge is a violent and terrifying mystery. Whispers of an uprising had made their way into the Loop, but it's unclear what the sides are in this new war—and what roles the Loop's former prisoners will play in it.
