Moth lost her entire family in a car crash last summer, leaving her feeling invisible and unwanted in her aunt's home. Then she meets Sani, who's struggling with a broken family, too. He sees her for what she is—beautiful, broken, and yet still so worthy of life's offerings. Together, the two steal away on a summer road trip to Sani's homeland in the Navajo Nation, sharing the dreams they keep hidden and practices they have in common. This poetic story is lyrically beautiful and spiritual as it artfully blends Voodoo and Native American religious practices.
